

Multigenerational Students: Strategies for Effective Teaching

September 19, 2003 with Dr. Machellev Davison (COP), Dr. Betty Kupperschmidt (CON)

What are the differences between generations and how do those influence the way students learn or faculty teach? What are techniques for multi-generational classrooms?

- Describe the basic or general characteristics of four generations (with major focus on Generation X and the Millennium or Net Generation) and the generational impact on students' attitudes.
- Discuss instructional design strategies to capture and hold the attention of multi-generational students.
- Apply specific strategies through a brainstorming exercise with colleagues
