3. Compare how your work connects to the needs assessment priorities as well as identify other players on the OUHSC campus who are working on community health-related efforts

Presenter Bio:

Halley Brunsteter Reeves is the Vice President of Community Health Impact for OU Medicine. Halley brings her public health practice and economic development training to bear in her work, offering health data analysis, planning, and assessment and various approaches to thinking about community health improvement efforts. OU Medicine is finishing its first Community Health Needs Assessment.

While living in Massachusetts, Halley worked at the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, the Metropolitan Area Planning Council, and MIT where she focused on incorporating the social determinants of health into health care policy and developing innovative investment strategies to fund healthy community and housing development.

She was recently named as a member of Oklahoma City's Forty under Forty by the Oklahoma Gazette. She holds an MPH from the University of Washington and a Master's in City Planning (MCP) from MIT. Raised in Oklahoma City, she and her partner returned to the area in 2018 to raise their two children near family.
