

Humanities in the Curriculum

Friday, April 17, 2009 with Dr. Jerry Vannatta

Learning Objectives

1. Understand the importance of the teaching of humanities in a medical education
2. See a demonstration of the teaching of literature in medical education

April 2009 EGR Presenter

Jerry Vannatta, M.D., is a David Ross Boyd Professor of Medicine and John Flack Burton Professor of Humanities in Medicine. He has created a curriculum to teach literature in medicine at the undergraduate honors college in Norman as well as in the medical school environment. He is co-author of a book length DVD on the use of literature in the teaching of medicine, and is the author of several papers relating to the humanities in medicine.

